COLOSSEUM.

Mr. Charles "Dingle" Coburn, the funny old meddler of "The More the Merrier" recently seen in Cape Town, is featured in a new laugh feast, "My Kingdom for a Cook," a Columbia picture directed by Richard Wallace, which opens at the Colosseum on Monday. Although his role in this is entirely different from his "Dingle" charac-terisation, it is even more hilarious. This time we see him as a snobbish, eccentric English author, with a passion for fine food and a biting word for all his contemporaries. Coming from London, he runs into the servant problem in America, and winds up stealing cooks so that he can have his "duck Bernaise." Marguerite Chapman and Bill Carter have the romantic leads, and Edward Gar-gan and Isobel Elsom head the supporting cast.

PLAZA.

"The Merry Widow" with Jeannette MacDonald and Maurice Chevalier is proving as popular as ever at the Plaza.

"Thirty Seconds Over Tokyo," M.G.M.'s big picture for 1945, will be the special Easter attraction. It takes 2 hours and 17 minutes to show.
Spectacular, gripping, intensely human and moving, it concerns the life and exploits of Lieut.-Col.
Doolittle who, contrary to his name, did a whole lot. Critics acclaim it a dignified, breathtaking and outstanding picture. With Spencer Tracy as Doolittle we are not likely to be disappointed.
The cast is long with Van Johnson in his biggest and best part. The all important member of this cast is the new comer, Phyllis Thaxter. London and New York are of opinion that we are likely to hear a lot about this beautiful and talented young lady.

ROYAL.

Little Margaret O'Brien appears to advantage in her latest role in M.G.M.'s "The Canterville Ghost," which opens on Monday at the Royal Theatre. In this film version of Oscar Wilde's celebrated story, Margaret co-stars with Charles Laughton, who plays the title role, and Robert Young, as an American Ranger. This is a delicious fantasy; it has comedy and drama and is hilarious and poignant.
