

TO EVERY POLITICIAN IN THE COUNTRY. 100 LINES.

I promise to stand up for children's rights
I promise to stand up for children's rights

I promise to stand up for children's rights
I promise to stand up for children's rights
I promise to stand up for children's rights
I promise to stand up for children's rights
I promise to stand up for children's rights
I promise to stand up for children's rights
I promise to stand up for children's rights
I promise to stand up for children's rights
I promise to stand up for children's rights
I promise to stand up for children's rights
I promise to stand up for children's rights
I promise to stand up for children's rights
I promise to stand up for children's rights
I promise to stand up for children's rights
I promise to stand up for children's rights
I promise to stand up for children's rights
I promise to stand up for children's rights
I promise to stand up for children's rights
I promise to stand up for children's rights
I promise to stand up for children's rights
I promise to stand up for children's rights
I promise to stand up for children's rights
I promise to stand up for children's rights
I promise to stand up for children's rights

Nearly 17 million South Africans are under 16. Yet not one of the major political parties in this country of ours, has written children's rights into their election manifestos.

With millions of children living in despair, hunger and neglect, it is time for every one of us to lobby our political leaders into making the rights of children a top priority.

And to strongly persuade them to enshrine those rights, much more powerfully into the new constitution.

After all, what does the New South Africa stand for, if our future is growing up as second class citizens.

ncrc
National Children's Rights Committee

CHILDREN'S RIGHTS vs CHILDREN WRONGED.