JEWISH THEATRICAL COMPANY.

Large audiences again attended the performances given by the Jewish Company this week.

On Monday night the hilarious comedy "The American Wedding" was staged, and thoroughly enjoyed by all. The play opens with a prologue set in Russia, in which Moishe, a teacher of Hebrew, assists his friend Aaron to escape with his wife and children to America. Years later, when Aaron is well established, Moishe and his daughter Sosele leave for America and arrive on the very day that Aaron's son is to be married. The bride, however, fails to turn up and as a last resort Sosele is substituted. Here the fun begins, for Sosele is a crude village girl, afflicted with the palsy which causes her to perform queer antics on the stage. Needless to say, Vera Kanevska in this part scored another great triumph and kept the audience in excellent humour throughout.

Paul Breilman, as the unwilling bridegroom, both acted and sang admirably, while Simche Natan was excellent as the old meddling grandfather. The rest of the cast all played their roles with great success.

"The American Wedding" is to be repeated later in the season.

Tuesday night saw a repeat performance of the excellent melodrama "The Eternal Mother," which was again very well received.

On Wednesday night the musical comedy "The College Girl" was given. Here Vera Kanevska in the title role showed once again what a very clever and talented actress she is. Her transformation from the young girl just back from college to the woman of the world, was decidedly funny, while her performance in the second act, where she has drunk a little too much champagne, was excellent. Special mention must also be made of her singing and dancing, which was of a very high standard.

Simche Natan, as her father, a banker threatened with bankruptcy, here showed that he can fill a serious role with the same success as a humorous one. Naomi Leventhal was very good as the elder sister from the country and Menassah Oppenheim raised a great deal of merriment. The other members of the cast were Paul Breitman, H. Kovarsky, Ida Hilda and B. Abramov.

On Saturday night, "The Gentleman Bandit" is to be produced. This sensational operetta, with Paul Breitman in the title role, should draw a large audience.
