DE ZUID-AFRIKAAN.

ASSOCIATION FOR EXPLORING CENTRAL AFRICA.—At a Meeting of the Committee of Management of the above Association, held on Friday, the 5th Feb. 1836.
Sir JOHN HERSCHEL, in the Chair.

The following Resolution was unanimously adopted.

That a General Meeting of Subscribers shall be called (on further Notice to be given,) for the purpose of receiving an Abstract of the Proceedings of the Expedition under Dr. A. Servie, together with the Treasurer's Report on the state of the Funds of the association, and also for considering the following Propositions to be submitted to them by the Committee, viz:

1. That the successful return of the present Expedition holds out so favorable a prospect of future Discovery, that it is expedient that this Association should not be dissolved, but should continue to exist as a permanent Institution for the further prosecution of its original object.

2. That it is inexpedient in the present state of the undertaking, that the rarer part of the Collections should be disposed of by public sale, at least, until the scientific results to be expected from their description and examination, shall be effectually secured.

3. That, however, the Collections may now or hereafter be disposed of by a vote of the Shareholders according to the Original Prospectus (Act. 4.) their produce shall be held by the Shareholders as a permanent fund for the support of ulterior operations—subject to existing claims.

4. That in the event of these Propositions being adopted, the Shareholders do proceed to elect a New Committee of Management, in place of the present, whose functions will then have ceased.

JOHN CENTLIVRES CHASE, Hon. Sec.

DE ZUID-AFRIKAAN.

After the expulsion of the Caffers from the Zuurveldt in 1812, it became necessary to keep a sufficient force on the Frontier, calculated to "oppose an insurmountable obstacle to their return to the Colony."—A military force, consisting chiefly of the Cape Regiment (then entirely Infantry, but strong in numbers) was therefore posted along the banks of the Great Fish River, from Van Aarde's to Caffer Drift, with the view of confining the restless savages to their side of the River, and for a considerable time it had the desired effect.—The losses they had sustained in the various attacks which ended in their discomfiture and retreat, had taught them to fear and respect the arms by which they had been worsted; and as they had never previously sustained any severe loss, the moral impression was very great, and not only did they give over all idea of repossessing themselves of their old haunts, but they even discontinued their marauding incursions for a considerable time.—Meanwhile the old occupants of lands in the Zuurveldt were invited to resume their farms, and settlements were offered to those who would undertake to reside.—Sir J. Cradock removed a large party of Hottentots from Bettelbos, &c., to an advanced situation in the Zuurveldt, where it was hoped their industry would quickly improve the soil, and fill the environs with a steady well-disposed body of men, capable of defending themselves, and of aiding in the support of such Settlers as should be induced to re-occupy the abandoned farms.—Graham's Town was marked out, and was destined to be the Head Quarters of that force, which was to guard the whole line of Frontier. It has been remarked that the situation chosen was not the most judicious, but is not the object of these observations to enter into that or similar questions, but to adhere strictly to the examination of those transactions with the Caffers, to which injuries have been imputed. (It has been said that subsequent to their expulsion the depredations were, for a time, nearly discontinued; but were so infrequent as not to make it necessary to take notice of them, but by degrees, as the military force on the Frontier was gradually weakened, and many posts broken up, they became more daring, and complaints of plundering were fast accumulating.)—A change of Government had again taken place, and Lord Charles Somerset deemed it advisable in 1817 to proceed to the Frontier, to endeavor to make such arrangements as should tend to the protection of the Colony. It will be seen that his measures had that object solely in view. He had communicated to the Caffer Chiefs, through the Magistrates, and through Mr. Williams, a Missionary, who was at that period settled at no great distance from Gaika's residence; the only object of which communication was to urge the principal Chiefs, and Gaika in particular, to adopt such measures as should compel the marauding Caffers to desist from molesting the Colonists; and on the other hand the strictest orders were issued to prevent any injury being done to the Caffers from the side of the Colony.—In a despatch to the Magistrate of Uitenhage, written previous to the interview with his Lordship at the assembled Chiefs at the Kat River in March, 1817, his Lordship caused that Magistrate to be informed "that it was his desire the Field Cornets should be again instructed to prevent any intrusion on the Caffer country from our side, and endeavour to impress upon the Settlers the importance of not trespassing upon their territory, or affording that people any just cause of offence, or complaint;" so fully was his Lordship impressed with the necessity of treating the Caffers with the strictest justice. At the same time Lord Charles explained his views with respect to the Caffer marauders in terms, the benevolence of which will probably be approved by those who have been taught by interested demagogues that the Colonial Government has uniformly treated these people with harshness and injustice.—In the same despatch it is observed, that "His Excellency hardly thinks it necessary to add, that upon all occasions it is his wish, his duty, to show the most attentive humanity to the ignorant and deluded savages, and to embrace every opportunity of evincing these sentiments to them.—It is always, therefore, with pain that he hears of the casualties which befall them in the course of the service in which we are engaged, and although he is well pleased that these accidents have diminished, yet it is more consonant with his feelings that they should be still further repressed.—With this view he has offered an adequate reward for such prisoners as shall be taken unhurt; and he has directed such to be conveyed to Uitenhage.—It is his intention that such prisoners shall be there usefully employed, taught, if possible, the Dutch language, and, by means of the Minister there, instructed in the first principles of religion, after which it is his intention to return them improved into their own country, and thus manifest to their Chiefs our humane conduct to them, and serious efforts to be essentially useful to them, and treat them with the most active friendship."—Such were the sentiments with which the interview at the Kat River took place, and such the feelings which were endeavoured to be impressed upon the Caffer Chiefs, as well as on the Colonial authorities. At the conference this was clearly explained to the assembled Chiefs, of whom Gaika and Slambie were the principal, though all, or almost all the Border Chiefs, were present.—Two principal objects resulted from this interview; the first was, that it was perfectly explained and agreed to, that should any cattle be purloined from the Colony after that time, which the whole of the Caffer Chiefs promised to do their utmost to prevent, that in such case the patrols should be authorized to trace the cattle into the Caffer territory, and "to ascertain to what kraals the stolen property had been driven, which it is essential to know before demanding restitution; for if a kraal shall be discovered to have the stolen cattle, or to have given facility to the thieves to pass through their districts with the stolen property, it seems just to require from such kraal the property or cattle in like number to that which has been purloined."—The Governor, therefore, authorized the officer commanding to act up to this intention, but he at the same time enjoined him to "take the strongest precautions to avoid accidents on all occasions in which it may be necessary to enter the Caffer country for these purposes."—It appears superfluous to defend the justice or propriety of this measure, unless it is to be argued, that the Caffers could succeed in driving their plunder beyond our boundary, that plunder was to be considered as theirs, and the Colonist was to sit down contented with his loss. If it has happened that in consequence of this order some kraals have been compelled to make restitution of property, which, in fact, had not been brought to it (a supposition which must not be taken as an admission of such having in any one instance been the case), but in the supposition that it had, still there would be no injustice in the case; for the Caffer nation was responsible to this nation for the injury done to it by Caffer people, and by the law of reprisals this nation had a right to seek its remedy where it could.—In the dreadful forays on the borders of England and Scotland when those nations were far more advanced in civilization than the Caffers are, or will be for some time to come, was not the system of account for a deficiency of £100, on which an answer was newspaper.

retaliation constantly acted upon? And even now, amongst the most polished nations, when an injury has been committed, and redress is sought, is it not unfortunately too often that the innocent suffer, he that would, if possible, remain on the most friendly terms with the national enemy. In the instance under discussion there is still less ground for cavil, as the mode of proceeding was one publicly agreed on by the whole body of Chiefs, and thus having had their assent, has been only made a subject of complaint.—The other object effected at the Kat River conference was the recognition of Gaika as the principal of the Border Chiefs. Little, or perhaps nothing, was at that time known of Hintza or his pretensions; besides, in what passed he could not be concerned, as he was not a Border Chief; but the others were strictly inferior to Gaika. It will be seen in Lichtenstein that shortly after General Janzen's communications with the rebel Chiefs, Janzen and Congo submitted to King Gaika; and, after the expulsion of the intruding Caffers, Slambie, and the rest of the rebel Chiefs, likewise made their submission, which certainly implies their admission of Gaika as their superior. Speaking of the whole of the Border Chiefs, Lichtenstein observes "They are vassals of the King (Gaika), Chiefs, as well as those under them; but the subjects are generally so blindly attached to their Chiefs that they will follow them against their King, as has been particularly the case in these latter times." It does not, therefore seem, that in acknowledging Gaika to be, what it appeared from all former intercourse with the Caffer people he assumed, and was even admitted to be, there was any thing which ought to have been considered injurious to the subordinate chiefs, or calculated to give them offence; it altered no relations amongst themselves, but appeared to be an arrangement equally beneficial to the Caffers and to the Colonial Government, and consonant to the precedents of all history.

This increasing prosperity must be greatly attributed to the opening of the Office every Saturday, instead of twice a month; for though your Committee trusts that the nature of the institution is becoming better known, still there is much ignorance to be removed, and they most earnestly call on the Members of the Society to embrace every opportunity of effecting so desirable an object.

In remarking the number of parents and masters who have opened accounts for their children and servants, your Committee beg to observe, that it is not the main object of the Bank to afford a place of safe deposit for the earnings of industry, but to create a habit of saving—and that this will be most effectually attained, by allowing children and servants personally to make frequent deposits of small sums, instead of larger sums deposited for them by others.

The amount at the credit of this Branch in the Parent Bank, at the commencement of the year, was £188. 19s. 9d., of which £187. 2s. 4d. belonged to Depositors, leaving a profit of £1. 10s. 5d. in favor of the Society.

During the past year the amount of Deposits was £433. 7s. 10d.—£88. 7s. 4d. have been repaid to Depositors, and the balance is £346. 9s. 9d. The Depositors being credited to the amount of £344. 16s. 0d., the profit for the year is £1. 1s. 9d.—as in addition to the sum paid for Stationery in 1834—£s. 5d. of interest have been lost in making remittances to the Parent Bank, the amount at the disposal of the Society is only £1. 13s. 9d.

The following gentlemen were duly elected for the present year:

President—D. J. van Ryneveld, Esq.

Vice-President—Rev. Mr. Herold.

Directors—F. Dickinson, Esq., Major Piera.

Managers—Meers, M. L. D., R. Saunders, Brugman, Knoop, P. Bosman, J. Blommestein.

Treasurer and Bookkeeper—Mr. R. Saunders.

(From the "Graham's Town Journal," of Feb. 11, 1836.)

The accounts from the new province are all of a peaceful character; and, considering the elements of which society there is composed, far better than could have been expected. We learn that two of Creiti's Caffers have been detected by Gazeli in horse stealing, duly convicted, and severely punished by flogging. A case of witchcraft, in which the chief Umhala is concerned, has been brought to light, and is undergoing some investigation. The chief Pato has likewise, it is said, been compelled to have recourse to violent means to enforce in one instance, obedience to his orders, and that life has been lost in the affray; but we have not the particulars of the matter, and shall not, therefore, dilate upon it. Some recent investigation has been manifested at permission having lately been given to Macomo to graze his cattle west of the Kieskamma: but we understand that this was granted merely to meet a temporary emergency; and has been withdrawn without disturbing the least of the existing cordiality.

Capt. Baile has, we are informed been actively employed of late in examining the mouth of the Buffalo with a view to its capabilities for maritime purposes. His report, we understand is most favorable; and is to the following effect:—Vessels of ten feet draught of water, and even twelve feet, if properly managed, may enter at spring tides. The place possesses every requisite of easy roads; plenty of fresh water, and fine timber. There is good grazing; a fine open sea, and no sand hills. A similar report to this was made by Capt. Baile years ago, with regard to the Fish River, which is infinitely to be preferred, in point of situation, to the Buffalo; and yet no notice whatever has been taken of the subject by government.

ANOTHER SPOKE IN THE DOCTOR'S WHEEL.
"Good people, all with one accord," lament for the Exodus of "the able Superintendent of the London Society's Missions" from the Colony of the Cape of Good Hope, having as his satellites Jan Tzatzos (as a specimen of what the London Missionaries, "have done for the CAFFER Aborigines") and young Reid (as a specimen of what we have done for the HOTTENTOT Aborigines). The Doctor goes home to answer certain charges to be brought against him resulting from the evidence of Major Dundas before the Committee of the House of Commons.

Before the able Superintendent leaves this we will ask him a few civil questions:—Whether or not at the grand conference between the Doctor, Mr. Fairbairn, Mr. Reid, senior, and others of the Anti-Colonial Party on the one side, and the Caffer Chiefs on the other, in 1830 or '31, Macome presented an Assegai to the Doctor's son-in-law (Jan Fabana, as he is known in Cafferland), to advocate his cause with the King of England?

Next we will inquire if it is not the case, that at the Hot-springs Settlement of Kat River, the ABORIGINES (that is the word for the people at home) were told that to Dr. Philip only that the Hottentots owned their land?—that the Caffers were told that Dr. Philip would get them back the Kat River? that the Fingoes were told to come out from among the Caffers, and live at Kat River, away from Caffer oppression? thus exhibiting a most profound specimen of trickery.

Next we ask, if there is any recollection of an Account sent from the London Society's Station on the Buffalo, in which the person who prepared it said, that he could not delay.—The number being completed, it will be notified in the newspaper.

EXCELLENT PASTURAGE FOR CATTLE.—Thornlands, consisting of the places named the Bakelys, Compagnie Rivier, Diesel Fontein, and Bontebok Kloof, containing jointly more than 10,000 morgen Freehold,—in, from its situation on the Buffeljags River, well supplied with water; and the Fields are now in a luxuriant state. The Undersigned, Proprietor of the said place Thornlands, hereby notifies to the Public, that Cattle will be taken in for Grazing, at the rate of Three Shillings per head per month, and the usual payment of 10 Rds. for Victuals to each Herdsman;—no order for Grazing need be obtained,—but the Cattle can be immediately sent, and the Herdsman needs but apply to Mr. J.
