A full and varied night at the Chelsea . . .

From left: Graham Clarke, Charles Comyn and Assie O'Donnell will close the evening with comedy and song.

The Chelsea Theatre will offer a mixed bag of entertainment when its new show opens on Wednesday evening.

The evening finishes with a late night revue called "Commit No Nuisance." For those who remember Charles Comyn and Co in the "Tortue Revue" last year, this could be exciting news.

All the sketches have been written by Dale Cutts and Ron Smerczak. The music and lyrics have been composed by David Marks. The show features Graham Clarke, Assie O'Donnell, Michael Maxwell and Charles Comyn, who also directed. The show will have a preview tomorrow night.

Great news

As a direct result of the late night revue, "Commit No Nuisance," which played at the Chelsea Theatre in May, a new rock band has come into being. It is called Fool Marx and is made up of Alan Hunter (drums), Yoshi Sho (lead guitar), Peter Zimmerman (keyboards) and Denis Lalouette (bass).

The vocalists are well-known actor Charles Comyn and Assie O'Donnell, last seen in "I'm Getting My Act Together," at the Arena Bistro. Nine numbers are written by David Marks and were originally used in the revue. The group are playing this weekend, and next, at Le Chaim. This venue isn't open on Fridays, but they make up for it by playing Sunday evenings.
