Michèle Maxwell explains

Michele — a treat to remember!

While each song had its particular merit, it was Michele's own compositions which were the highlight of this hour-long show — particularly The Frozen Baltic Sea.

Michele's music goes a long way back

So that's why the lady is a tramp

Her choice is wide and varied. While it is difficult to single out any song — the show just got better and better — her version of Dave Brubeck's arrangement of Mr Bojangles was the highlight.

Michele's songs are highlights of a good show

Michele, who has performed in London, New York and several other major centres, is back in South Africa after an eight-year absence. And she has brought with her a real professionalism.

Michele's music of the spheres

MICHELE MAXWELL (vocalist/pianist/songwriter) will play "pure jazz, poetry set to music and stories with the music following the words" at the Planetarium, Museum tonight at 8pm. She will be joined by Dave Ledbetter (keyboards/guitar) and Jazz is her forte. What a shame more jazz lovers weren't aware of this, for there were one or two empty seats. I am sure on the strength of last night's performance she would pack out the whole Opera House!

I took a little while for her to adjust to being back in South Africa after her time in London but Lady Lefthand, alias Michele Maxwell, is now working as hard as ever.
