THE YEAR 1992

WINNER 1993

This wonderfully original production is an anatomical comedy using the human body as a landscape through which to make an hilarious, satirical and allegorical journey through the innards of the South African body politic.

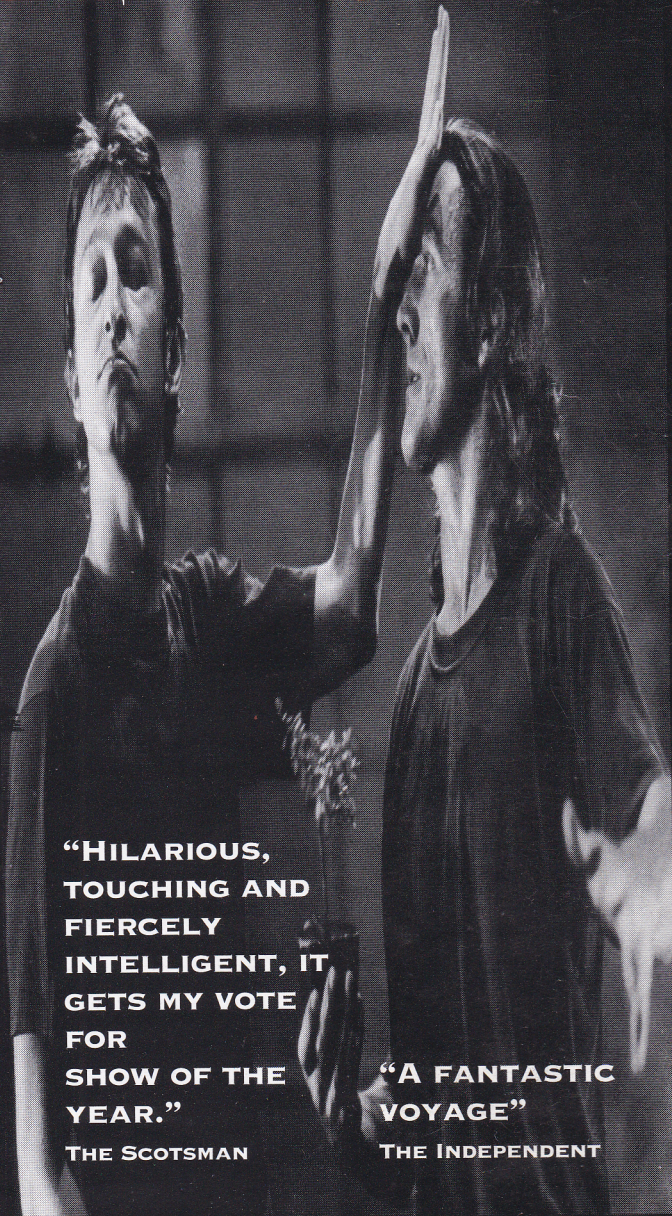

The narrative follows the quest of Dimitre, the last tree on earth, who has just one hour to enter the body of axe-wielding lumberjack Mr R Soul, to find his mind and to change it. In the right buttock he is adopted by a couple of subversive blood cells who lead him on his incredible quest. The left and right testicles are locked in debate, the socialist kidneys are preparing a stone to launch against the fascist dominator. But no-one seems to know exactly where the tyrannical decision maker actually is.

Two of South Africa's foremost performers, Andrew Buckland and Lionel Newton, present a unique blend of physical theatre, satire and pure comedy... uninhibited, inspirational joy .
