

I WANT A PARTY THAT'LL STAND UP TO THE ANC. DO I HAVE TO VOTE FOR THE NATS?

We know that some of you are still thinking this. You may not like the Nats, or trust them, but you think you have to vote for them or you'll weaken the opposition.

This isn't true. The words "Nats" and "opposition" do not mean the same thing. After the election there will be several opposition parties. All the parties which oppose the ANC will form the opposition.

It's vital to understand that, in Parliament after the election, all the votes of all the parties opposing the ANC will be counted together - irrespective of how those votes are made up.

This means you are free to vote for a party which can provide really effective opposition. A party which really believes in the things it stands for. A party which, because of this, will fight harder.

This party is the Democratic Party, and if you vote for us, you won't be alone.

People from all over the country are moving to us because they realise only the DP can provide a better calibre of opposition. (Remember, every 1% of the vote puts another 4 Democrats in Parliament). So vote for the Democratic Party. If you think it would weaken the opposition, we'd like to tell you something. The only way to weaken the opposition would be by not voting for us.

DEMOCRATIC PARTY. PROTECTING YOU FROM THE ABUSE OF POWER.
