(IF THAT WERE TRUE, WOULD ALL THESE MAJOR NEWSPAPERS BE SUPPORTING US?)

Who should you vote for in these elections?

Everybody seems to be promising the same things. Everybody says they're "the only choice". But what may be more relevant at this critical time is to look and see what some of the country's most respected political commentators are saying.

The Natal Mercury, for example, stated that: "the country needs parties to balance the strength of the majority party. The DP may not be a big party, but 20 of its MP's will do more for democracy than 200 from the ANC or 80 from the NP."

Business Day feels "the Nats will either cave in to the ANC or lack the skill to counter it effectively. Only the DP can be trusted to play the proper watchdog role." Financial Mail feels "the best opposition to the expected ANC majorities will undoubtedly be provided by the DP". And these aren't the only newspapers supporting us. The Sunday Tribune, The Star, the Cape Times, and even the Sunday Times. All have publicly asked their readers to vote for the Democratic Party. Bear in mind they have nothing to gain from asking you to vote in this way.

Like us, all they want is a better new South Africa.

Like us, they know this can only be achieved with a strong opposition in Parliament.

And like us, they know that the strength of an opposition depends far more on its effectiveness and its level of commitment than its size.

So when you go to the polls, please remember these points - the points the experts have made.

And then, like them, give us your vote of confidence.
