THE ZUED-AFRIKAAN.

CAPE TOWN, MAY 19, 1842.

THE Resolutions adopted by the Worcester Meeting, will, no doubt, receive that due consideration which the subject requires.

Those who are acquainted with the situations of the field-cornets therein mentioned, will at once perceive, and feel convinced of the truth, and the correct conclusions therein set forth.

Du Toit's Kloof connects the rich and fertile land in the District of Worcester, with the Paarl, and thence to Cape Town, in nearly a direct line, avoiding first the circuitous route through Franschhoek's Pass, and next the bad roads from thence, in another circuitous route—either through Great Drakenstein, to fall into the road from the Paarl to Cape Town—or through Banhoek, to fall into the road from Stellenbosch to Cape Town.

The opening of Mosterd's Hoek only, would be no benefit to Worcester, as it would open for the inhabitants of Bolkeveld the passage to the Cape through the Tulbagh Division, independent of the little advantage to be derived from a greater quantity of produce, as stated in the 6th Resolution.

We hope the framers of the measure will see the great difference, existing between the pass of Mosterd's Hoek and Du Toit's Kloof,—the advantage to be derived from the latter, and the greater extent to which, through Du Toit's Kloof, the connection with the producing Districts will be established, and thus incline to make Du Toit's Kloof in preference to Mosterd's Hoek.

The considerations and objections of the inhabitants of Worcester are now before the public; together with those which have been raised by the Farmers of the Stellenbosch and Cape Districts, and the inhabitants of Cape Town; and we refrain from arguing upon the question, before the new Bill shall have been introduced into the Council, and the public thus have become regularly acquainted with the grounds upon which it shall be based.

The objection against the rate, to be levied upon the proprietors of landed property, remains unabated; and if there be anything that clearly marks the injustice of the principle, it may be found in the Synopsis of the population of the Cape Town Municipality, showing the total number of inhabitants (exclusive of visitors) to be 21,840, and the number of proprietors, who alone would have to pay the rate for the benefit of the 21,840, is by far less than 9,000!!!

The proprietors, therefore, justly trust that their objections will not be discarded, and thus a beneficial measure lost; nor they be left in the hands of Trustees to recover either from proprietors or occupiers, as they shall please, when every one knows before hand that they will adopt the more easy mode of collecting money from the proprietors.

Counselor Longfield.—Before the court is opened, I ask Father Collins, will he get a hearing for Mr. Longfield and his friends?

Father Collins.—I will not suppress public feeling.

Counselor Longfield.—Will you exert yourself to do it?

Father Collins.—I will not be a servant to the antagonist party. (Yells.)

Counselor Longfield.—It seems a fair proposal to some of you, but you, Father Collins, may act as you please.

Father Collins.—never did any thing, nor ever will, to suppress public feeling. (Hisses.)

Counselor Longfield.—We do not want you to suppress public feeling, but to suppress outrage.

Father Collins.—You are mere things of clay; you have no souls; you are mere two legged animals to whom nature by mistake gave the human form. (Shouting.)

Mr. Fitzsimon.—Ask the Seneschal what he came to the court for?

The Seneschal replied.—To hold the election as seneschal of the borough.

The Seneschal then proceeded to read a correspondence he had had in reference to the appointment of an assessor, a relative of lady Norrys; but was stopped by Counselor O'Leary, on the part of Sir Denham, who said that it was mere personal explanation, which they had nothing to do with.

Father Collins then cried out to open the court and let in the people, which another priest ran out into the streets, and told the mob, which amounted to from 20,000 to 30,000 people, that the Tories had taken possession of the last-hand gallery, and for them to rush up the stairs, break in the door, and throw them over. Immediately, on the doors being opened, the rush that was made into the building shook the stoutest heart, and even made the priests quail for their safety, though in the hands of their own party, every gentleman in the body of the court was forced from his place, and closely jammed round by the mob.

Father Collins then endeavoured to mount above the rest, and wave a white handkerchief, calling for a cheer for the people, which was responded to, and a groan for the Tories, which was answered by a howl the most ferocious that could be imagined, in which they had been instructed parochially during the last three weeks. Now the attack commenced on the door of the gallery, in which the Conservatives were, which was defended from within for some time amidst yells from the mob in the body of the building to "tear the guts out of the — Orangemen"; at length the door was shattered to pieces by sledging it with stones on the outside, and the breach was defended from within for a few minutes, until the ruffians, being over-numerous for the small band that tried to oppose them, and being evidently determined on slaughter, the Conservatives had to give way, when some of them threw themselves from the gallery down on the dense mass below, and the remainder were flung over the railings. This did not satisfy the blood-thirsty wretches, who, perceiving that Mr. Longfield, his proposer, seconded, agents, and friends, were beneath them, mounted the gallery, and leaped on the heads of those gentlemen, who had no means of escape, as they were pressed together by the mob surrounding them at all points.

During this scene, the ruffians in the lower part of the court were yelling on the desperadoes above, amidst which were to be heard, "Murder the — Orangemen" the cry of the injured, the screams of those who saw something before them but death, many of whom were Sir Denham's own friends, and the shouts of Dr. Linchane and Mr. Briddle, both justices of the peace, to spare the lives of the Tories. Here Mr. Ware, justice of the peace, called upon the Stipendiary for assistance, to endeavor to protect the lives of those who were in jeopardy; but the stipendiary was unable to stir, and the fight had appeared in seemed to make him regret that he had not taken the precautions he was bound to have taken; and there he was in the closely-packed crowd, looking up to Father Collins in the most pitiful manner, imploring him to save their lives. It would be very difficult to extricate himself for this situation in which the impudent was placed, with a troop of Dragoons, a large body of infantry, and 400 or 500 police under his command, but which, through his indecision, he was of all commandments void, and was consequently obliged to beseech the protection of an electioneer priest, who had at his back a sum of 20,000 or 30,000 ferocious ruffians, who were engaged in trampling on and assaulting gentlemen who had assembled in discharge of their public duty, but to whom the authority vouchsafed no protection. We say authority for the military and consular were not under the surveillance of any of the local magistrates. Mr. Ware having frequently called on the stipendiary to aid the lives of Her Majesty's subjects. Mr. Smith said that he would get in the voice of his master, and go to see to it.

Father Collins replied.—Let the people alone—don't attempt to interfere with them. I know their temper—you are a stronger. Don't mind what Mr. Ware here says to you (there were ruffians commenced looting from the gallery on the heads of those beneath and poor Mr. Smith trembled for his own safety.) Quiet boys, hear me; for my cause (Awful confusion, the voices of hundreds yelling out "Murder," while Sir Denham and Father McCarthy and Morrice scrambled over the shoulders of those in the gallery to endeavour to prevent them from leaving down, during which Father Collins was roaring out to be heard).

Mr. Ware.—The clerk of the peace has been hurt, perhaps killed. Why doesn't the stipendiary do his duty?

Mr. Smith.—Mr. Collins, Mr. Collins, I have no authority here; the Seneschal has all the power. (If this were the fact, the Seneschal appeared unconscious of it, for he trembled for his safety, as well as the stipendiary.)

Counselor Longfield.—I call on the Seneschal to adjourn the Court.

Father Collins.—Never mind that booted man. (Howling, with cries of "Coffin them!" Boys, quiet—"Kill them and Orange Longfield!") Quiet boys! (Tremendous uproar, with cries of "Tear the — guts out of them!")

This was followed in the course of the day by other scenes equally disgusting and lamentable.—Times.

Supply a precedent for this situation in which the impudent was placed, with a troop of Dragoons, a large body of infantry, and 400 or 500 police under his command, but which, through his indecision, he was of all commandments void, and was consequently obliged to beseech the protection of an electioneer priest, who had at his back a sum of 20,000 or 30,000 ferocious ruffians, who were engaged in trampling on and assaulting gentlemen who had assembled in discharge of their public duty, but to whom the authority vouchsafed no protection. In the Estate of Mrs. SUSANNA MARIA DU TOIT, and deceased Husband HERCULIS VILJOEN, Sen. of Keizers Rivier, District of Worcester.

ON WEDNESDAY, the 24th May next, will be sold at the Phœnix "Vryheid," situated at Keizers Rivier, District of Worcester, the whole of the Effects, comprising one-eighth Share in the Perpetual Quivert Farm called "Vryheid," situated as aforesaid, being an excellent and extensive Grain and Cattle Farm, and particularly adapted for Merino Sheep.

Paraffine of various descriptions, Glass and Earthenware, Kitchen Utensils, &c. &c., all sorts of Furniture, Clocks, Cocks, Buckets, &c. Brandy Still, & Raisin Still, a few Leagues of Wine, Brandy and Vinegar, 1 Horn, Saddle and Bridle, a Cart for either one or two Horses, a quantity of Dried Fruit, some Carpenters' Tools, and several other articles, which will be offered on the day of sale.

I would not have replied so seriously to the paragraph in the "Shipping List," which does much of its authenticity elsewhere, by the postscript wherewith it ends (the Master's report), and which proves, that it is still the Captain alone who speaks, were it not that Mr. Lorraine, having found here several officious echoes, who repeat three stories, word by word; I find myself under the obligation to oppose them with regard to facts, which will be investigated with more circumspection, at least as regards me personally. I am well aware Mr. Editor, that in every country it is only necessary for the noise of an animal with long ears to put in train all of its kind; and I have myself heard a certain Mr. Des Chalmeau speak evil in my presence of the affair of the Severe, and making use among others of the words ringebader and investigator, who he said was really unknown to him, but respecting whom the Consul would take his measures. The idea of an individual like Mr. Des Chalmeau, who undertakes to speak with such assurance of a thing of which he is entirely ignorant, made me laugh, as one always laughs, when a fool is heard to talk nonsense.

Accept in the mean time, Mr. Editor, the assurance of my respect, and acknowledgement.

MONTONIER, 2d Captain of the brig Le Severe.

Cape Town, May 13, 1843.

Although the Undersigned has no thorough knowledge of the Smith's Trade, he will nevertheless exert himself to execute all orders entrusted to him with neatness and dispatch, and on the lowest terms.

The Undersigned also avails himself of this opportunity to intitiate, that his Saddle and Harness Maker's Shop is still carried on, and trusts that those who have taken another house, his Customers will take the trouble to proceed a few paces further on, to provide themselves with good workmanship.
