Chelwood Vachery,
Nutley, Sussex.

Despise not landscape, Sky, Earth unite
To form its Beauty, Winter's icy snow, Spring breezy showers and Summer's sunshine bright,
Are preludes meet for fruitful Autumn's glow
When leaves and fruit of gorgeous colours vie
With richest gems of Nature's alchemy.

Think of the Trees piercing the ambient air, Man's noblest works, his great Cathedral piles
With Nature's woodland faes cannot Compare
Where towering trees arch over green-walled aisles,
Their leafy boughs encroaching on the sky,
To form giant roofs that glow with emerald light
Where choirs of feathered songsters sing on high Trilling to Heaven psalms of pure delight.
