"HENRY VIII." AT THE METRO.

A masterpiece indeed is showing at the Metro this week in "The Private Life of Henry VIII." This is a superbly produced historic comedy drama, in which England's greatest actor, Charles Laughton, takes the leading role and grips the onlooker with his genius. The technical work of the film is superlative and the characterization flawless. The whole is an epic of the film. No genuine lover of the highest in film production should miss this magnificent film-story.

"CAVALCADE" AT THE COLOSSEUM

There can be no doubt that "Cavalcade" at the Colosseum this week is the greatest film of the present generation. The whole idea has been magnificently conceived by Noel Coward and faithfully produced by an army of loyal film workers. "Cavalcade" presents an enormous canvas. One goes through the experience of years during the release of this intense story, beautifully and sympathetically shown on the screen.

The playing of the Colosseum Orchestra further adds to the great enjoyment of a visit to the Colosseum this week.
