The Gordon Highlanders.

The success which has attended the performances given by the Gordon Highlanders in Cape Town have been phenomenal. Last Friday and Saturday the City Hall was packed to overflowing and every item on the programme was received with tremendous enthusiasm by the vast audiences. Two extra concerts were arranged for Tuesday night and Wednesday afternoon and these too were exceptionally well attended and received. The Highlanders have certainly given Cape Town something distinctly novel in the way of entertainment; their magnificent playing and Highland dancing leave nothing to be desired, and Cape Town will look forward eagerly to a return visit by this famous band.

THE PLAZA.

Something out of the ordinary run of film fare opens at the Plaza, with the presentation of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's new romantic adventure drama, "Trouble for Two," co-starring Robert Montgomery and Rosalind Russell, with Frank Morgan, Reginald Owen and Louis Hayward in the supporting cast.

Based on "The Suicide Club," a story by the immortal Robert Louis Stevenson, the plot concerns itself with a prince and princess who, bored with the rituals and trappings of a royal existence, set out to find love and adventure and find themselves, instead, involved in a sinister organisation known as "The Suicide Club," and designed solely for the perpetuation of murder.
