"Candida" at the Guild

It must appear that the dramatic section of the Jewish Guild saw a minor consummation of their ambitions last Sunday night, when George Bernard Shaw's "Candida" was presented in the Guild hall. They have striven so long with second-rate plays in a not conspicuously successful fashion, but it seems that the artistry of the dramatist served to inspire the performers in this instance. The acting was good, and the production almost so; which is strange, considering the tradition, amounting almost to a "hoodoo,"which surrounds Shaw's plays and renders them, in the hands of amateurs, virtually a back-firing petard. It must appear that the dramatic section

Norman Friedman was impressive as the self-righteous Rev. Mr. James Morell, and sustained the starker moments of the action well. Rena Abelheim, in the role of his wife, was good, though a tendency to overarticulation may have been engendered by the atmosphere of the play. Julius Sergay, as the sensitive plant Eugene Marchbanks, was most convincingly costumed, and although again a trifle prone to strained enunciation of his lines, was good. The bourgeois Mr. Burgess, Candida's father, was played by Cyril Hoffman with enormous gusto; the role was a little too highly contrasted with the saintly atmosphere that was the entire rest of this Shaw play.

If Shaw could ever be accused of adopt-If Shaw could ever be accused of adopting the subterfuge of a "comic relief," Proserpine Garnett, played by Cecile Cohen, would be the evidence of his guilt. It was a role extraordinarily well handled. Norman L. Danzig filled a back-ground role. Sheila Nathanson's production success must have been the result of considerable effort.

Davis-Marks, who read the additional service, whilst Mrs. Max Marks, chairlady of the Sisterhood, lit the Chanukah candles. The choir, under the direction of Mr. J. A Good South African Boxing Programme

An interesting boxing tournament was held under the auspices of the Union Sporting Club on Saturday night, the 12th inst., ing Club on Saturday night, the 12th inst., at the City Hall. The main bout was for the Transvaal feather-weight championship between "Babe" Smith, the holder, and George Anderson, of Johannesburg. This was a great battle and was even throughout. During the tenth round, Smith slipped and came dawn on his damaged knee. This forced him down on his damaged knee. This forced him to change his stance to "southpaw," which puzzled Anderson, and Smith won the last two rounds, thus winning the fight. The bout was fought at a great pace and both boys boxed skilfully.

In the preliminaries Leslie Wolchuk, of Johannesburg (with the Mogen Dovid on his shorts) beat Kosie Pretorius after a battle, marked rather by willingness of the exchanges than for its scientific qualities. In the middle-weight bout, J. L. Smith beat J. van der Walt. Teddy Braun, of Johannesburg, was too fast for Jack Goosen, who fought back with pluck and doggedness. Alec Hannan, South Africa's bantamweight at the Olympic Games, made his professional debut against Alec Knight. Hannan's superior speed was his chief asset against Knight's continued onslaughts, and he emerged the winner on points. All the preliminaries were over six rounds, and the tournament from the boxing point of exchanges than for its scientific qualities. In the tournament from the boxing point of view was a distinct success.
