Ronald Colman Becomes a Poet

"If I Were King," this week's attraction at the Colosseum Theatre, is a great film. Taking the part of Francois Villon, the historical poet, and supported by Frances Dee, who scored so successfully in "Wells Fargo," Ronald Colman once again captures his audience with his charm and romantic personality. With Basil Rathbone (who takes the part of Louis VI.), Ellen Drew (Paramount's newest find) and an excellent supporting cast, Frank Lloyd's latest production is one not to be missed.

Musical Masterpiece at the Metro

Now in its second week, "Sweethearts," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's musical masterpiece in Technicolour, is still drawing huge crowds to the Metro Theatre. The supporting programme is excellent.
