A CLEVER PRODUCTION AT LIBRARY THEATRE

"What Next, Baby?"

IT was an interesting experience to listen to some really clever satire at the Library Theatre this week, when "What Next, Baby?" by A. G. Mac Donell, was produced by Mr. Leo Kerz, in aid of the Joint Emergency Appeal.

A lady who sat near the writer said she could not understand all this fuss about the lives and temperaments of two actresses. It was obvious she did not realise that the play was a satire on two fairly well-known dictators and upon their joint plans to conquer the universe. It was not an easy play to produce, in view of the fact that the actors must have felt they were only puppets used to express the satire in the author's mind. Nevertheless, the production went with a swing and was most interesting.

Excellent work in the main roles of the two actresses was rendered by Esther Lutrin and Lilian Lazarus. They both proved accomplished artists and got the best out of their parts. The stage settings were unique, amusing and ultra modern.
