"Mrs. Miniver" at Metro

Subtlety, charm, humour and pathos go to make up the picture at the Metro this week. In "Mrs. Miniver" the public is given an extremely realistic version of life in Britain today, and of the courage of the ordinary man and woman. Almost a guarantee in itself of the picture's success is the fact that delightful Greta Garson and Walter Pidgeon take the leading roles.

"Two-Faced Woman" at Curzon

Greta Garbo gives what is probably one of the best performances of her screen career in "Two-Faced Woman," which makes a welcome return to the Curzon this week. Both as the athletic, unworldly woman and as the woman of night clubs and champagne she is irresistible. Popular Melvyn Douglas proves an able co-partner to Garbo in this highly entertaining film.

"Underground" at the Empire

"Underground" now enters on its second week at the Empire. It is an intensely human story woven round topical events, and the production is skilfully handled. Jeffrey Lynn takes the leading role and gives a splendid performance. He is supported by a fresh and promising newcomer in the person of Kaaren Verne.

"This Gun for Hire" at Plaza

There is excitement galore at the Plaza this week. The picture showing is "This Gun for Hire," and it should draw crowded houses. Veronica Lake and Alan Ladd take the leading roles in this sensational film.

"Friendly Enemies" at 20th Century

"Friendly Enemies," at the Twentieth Century this week, is a picture guaranteed to dispel the deepest depression. Those two inimitable comedians, Charles Ruggles and Charles Winninger, are featured in it, and keep the fun going from beginning to end. Others appearing in this most diverting film are James Craig, Nancy Kelly, Ilka Gruning and Otto Kruger.

"King's Row" at Colosseum

Henry Bellamann's best-seller, "King's Row," comes to life at the Colosseum this week. An intensely moving and gripping film, it has thrilled cinema audiences, and the description of it as "the best film of 1942" is far from exaggerated. Certainly, this picture, with Ronald Reagan and Ann Sheridan in the leading roles, should not be missed.
