ALHAMBRA.

Paul Robeson, whose voice has thrilled millions all over the world, can be heard to-night at the Alhambra Theatre, where "King Solomon's Mines" is playing.

This is a magnificent adaptation of H. Rider Haggard's enthralling adventure story and Paul Robeson has the starring role as Umbopa, the gigantic Negro, who reclaims his lost heritage from the immense tribe of the Kukuanas.

The songs this great artist sings in the picture form an integral part of the story and were specially composed by Mischa Spoliansky, with lyrics by Eric Maschwitz. A never-to-be-forgotten moment in the film occurs when the hunting party, led by Umbopa, after a tortuous journey across the desert reach the foot of the mountains beyond which lies their goal—King Solomon's Mines. Weary and foot-sore as they are, the great crags seem insurmountable but the negro, pressing forward, spurs them on with a song, his great voice resounding among the mountains, the rumbling echoes creating an effect never before heard on the screen.

PLAZA.

A story idea based on real life written by Erich Von Stroheim, has inspired one of the most important Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer pictures of the year.

The picture is "Between Two Women" featuring Franchot Tone, Maureen O'Sullivan and Virginia Bruce, which is showing at the Plaza Theatre next week.

Prominent in the cast are Leonard Penn, Cliff Edwards, Janet Beecher, Charley Grapewin, Helen Troy, Grace Ford, June Clayworth, Edward Norris, Anthony Nace and Hugh Marlowe.

Tone appears in one of the biggest roles of his career, a studious surgeon devoted to his work.

Maureen O'Sullivan plays the nurse hero who, although married, falls in love with Tone.

Three Jewish Plays.

The Dramatic Group of the Cape Town Herzlia will present three Jewish plays at the Zionist Hall on October 14th at 8.15 p.m.

One is a thriller entitled "The Brass Door Knob," which describes how a spy attempting to steal the fortification plans of the Jewish State is foiled by a woman's wit; the second is a picture of labour life, "The Eternal Song" by Mary Arnstein, which takes place in any great city at any time, as the theme is universal. "She Must Marry a Doctor," the third play, is a farce by Sholem Aleichem, the famous Jewish writer. It is still extremely topical and most interesting. The plays have been very well cast and are sure to prove of great general interest. The producer is Mrs. Sylvia Nell. Tickets are obtainable from any member of the Committee, or from the Youth Office, 85 Plein Street, Cape Town.
