ALHAMBRA

"SNOW WHITE and the SEVEN DWARFS," Walt Disney's gorgeously produced musical feature-length animated picture in Technicolour, was launched with a notable world-premiere at the Carthay Circle Theatre in Los Angeles shortly before last Christmas, followed thereafter with a record-breaking run at the New York's world-famed Radio City Music Hall, and has become the sensation of motion picture entertainment. It has taken its place in the front ranks of important film attractions, and comes to the Alhambra from Monday.

PLAZA.

Margaret Sullavan, whose brilliant performance in her initial Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer film, "Three Comrades" immediately established her as a popular favourite, does her finest bit of work in "SHOPWORN ANGEL" in which she plays the part of a girl with a hardboiled past who marries an unsophisticated, naive soldier, on the eve of his departure on active service. As the soldier James Stewart gives an excellent performance adding the right touch of humour to a dramatic role, and Walter Pidgeon is equally effective in the part of a rich man-about-town without any illusions.

Note should be made of the Special School Holiday Morning Shows at the Plaza next Thursday, Friday and Saturday. That magnificent picture, "DAVID COPPERFIELD," will be the featured attraction. The Admission Price for Scholars is 8d.

COLOSSEUM.

"MAD ABOUT MUSIC" which opened at the Colosseum last Saturday, has been drawing crowded houses and will be continued next week. Deanna Durbin, in the leading role, is as enjoyable and refreshing as ever. The acting mainly takes place at a girls' school in Switzerland and gives Deanna many opportunities for using her magnificent voice. Herbert Marshall, as the bogus father, acts with his usual self-restraint and charm. Gail Patrick, as the film star mother, has comparatively little to do, but does it well. The film as a whole has been designed to appeal to the greatest possible number of people and is well worth seeing.

ROYAL

Reuniting four who contributed so largely to the success of "Topper" a few months ago, "MERRILY WE LIVE," which opens Monday at the Royal Theatre, was directed by Norman Z. McLeod, has Constance Bennett as one of its stars and Billie Burke and Alan Mowbray heading the supporting cast.
