Phillip Rabinowitz with C.T. Orchestra.

outstanding feature of the programme of Cape Town Orchestra's Young People's Concert at the City Hall on Saturday evening, 24th March, was the playing of the first movement Handel's E Minor Concerto for violin and orchestra by Phillip Rabinowitz.

eleven years of age, Phillip Rabinowitz, made his debut in a work that made exacting demands, proved that he has continued along the path of serious study with considerable profit and is progressing gratifyingly towards a great promise. He has built up a good technique and plays with generally accurate intonation, with good taste and with poise. He strives now especially for greater beauty of tone and for deeper comprehension of the music for greater emotional response to it. What does lack, time will supply.

PLAZA.

A Greer Garson picture is always something of a treat for cinema-goers. This time we see her as Susie Parkington, the newest and one of the most picturesque of Louis Bromfield's characters in the film "Mrs Parkington" now showing at the Plaza. The story covers the period 1875 to 1888, a fine and interesting period, the latter part allowing for frequent flash-backs. Walter Pidgeon plays the opposite role and the supporting cast features Gladys Cooper and Cecil Kellaway.

ALHAMBRA.

"A Medal for the General," directed by Maurice Elvey who was responsible for that excellent British production "Salute John Citizen," opens at the Alhambra on Saturday. Based on the novel by James Ronald, the film stars Godfrey Tearle, Jeanne de Casalis and two great Scots actors,
