Yfrah Neaman.

Yfrah Neaman, the 22-year-old violinist from London, who is giving such a brilliant series of recitals throughout South Africa, appears in Cape Town at the City Hall on June 27th, accompanied by the English pianist, John Pritchard. Neaman is a slight, unassuming young man, and only his musician's hands, which are supple, with square-tipped nails, proclaim his profession.

Neaman was born in Palestine. His exceptional gifts became marked at a very early age, and after turning nine he went to study at the Paris Conservatoire. Here he became the "star pupil" of Jacques Thibaud, the greatest violinist France has produced for the past half-century. His success was instantaneous, and three years later he played solos as the representative of the Conservatoire, being acclaimed by leading critics as a great virtuoso.

When war broke out he was persuaded to leave for England with his father, mother and young sister. Then, only 17 years old, he became a factory worker and shared with his companions many bad moments in the blitz. In the odd hours between shifts his violin was a never-failing consolation and recreation to them.

In 1944 he deputised for Max Rostal at a concert in London, and the following day the famous London music critic, James Agate, wrote a special article in the "Daily Express" which acclaimed him as the discovery of the century. Neaman's rise to fame was now rapid, and a great career is predicted for this young man by leading critics who are well known for seldom being carried away by enthusiasm.

PLAZA.

As the screen's top-ranking dance star, Fred Astaire has done everything but dance to a modern tune played on a harp. Now he does that in one of the original dance routines of "Yolanda and the Thief," now showing at the Plaza Theatre. This lavish new musical co-stars Astaire with Lucille Bremer, his partner of "Ziegfeld Follies."

"I'M SO HUNGRY MUMMY!"

Do you want to hear that, knowing you've failed to do your share to save bread? Only individual collective effort will enable us to tide over the present acute shortage of wheat till new imports become available.

REMEMBER!

1. Buy only as much bread as you need.
2. Remember that it is wrong—and unfair to yourself—to sift meal.
3. Don't cut off crusts.
4. Don't feed bread to animals.
5. Don't slice bread up before a meal. Cut each slice from the loaf as it is needed.
6. Cut thinner slices.
7. Keep bread fresh, so that each loaf lasts as long as possible.
8. Don't use fresh bread for making puddings or other dishes.
