THE ZUID-AFRIKAAN.

CAPE TOWN, DECEMBER 18, 1831.

SCENE AT THE JAGHNIK MILL. After the battle of 1831, John Influence and his men were interned in a large stockade. When the British attacked, he and his men were wounded in the leg and captured. The British took them to a nearby town and held them captive for several days. Eventually, they were released and allowed to return to their homes.

Shona, the native language of the Shona people, is spoken in the Zimbabwe and Mozambique. It is a Bantu language and is one of the most widely spoken languages in the region. The language is known for its complex grammar and vocabulary.

IMPORTANT TO SUBSCRIBERS.

To the Editor of "The Zuid-Afrikaan."

I have been informed that the second edition of your paper will be published soon. I have been waiting for this edition with great anticipation, as I have heard that it contains important news.

Do you understand this? This means, translated from the Shona language, that you are not able to understand the language.

Oriana, yes. Yes, I understand something. But you see, it is not English. It is not English.

To be sure, George, you know what I asked at Mr. and Mrs. and I asked for the Western Times, and that is why I am asking for the Western Times.

This is what I mean. This is what I mean. This is what I mean. I have been waiting for this edition with great anticipation, as I have heard that it contains important news.

PECULIAR.

By the late Capt. H. F. C. S., late of the 1st Bengal Artillery, 1st. 1st Bengal Artillery, was a man of peculiar habits. He always carried a telescope in his pocket, and would often be seen, when not engaged in military duties, looking through it at the various objects around him. His love for astronomy and natural history was well known, and he was always ready to give information on these subjects. He was also a great admirer of music, and was often to be seen attending concerts and musical performances. Despite his military duties, he managed to maintain a keen interest in the arts. His unique personality and his passion for learning and exploration made him a fascinating figure in the army, and his contributions to knowledge in various fields were significant. He was truly a man of exceptional qualities, and his legacy continues to inspire those who come across his work.
