

Pakistani pop star in Durban

PAKISTANI pop star, Alamgir Haq, slipped unnoticed into Louis Botha Airport, Durban, last night.

The superstar, who sings in 15 languages, flew straight from the United States where he completed a nationwide tour of that country which ended last weekend.

Promoter Mr Gora Kadodia said that Alamgir would rest, play squash and take in the sights of Durban until the rest of his troupe arrives in the city from the United States on Friday.

He will be performing at the Durban City Hall on September 5.—Daily News reporter
