

Is this what the Nationalist government thinks a South African brain looks like?

The price of oil on international markets goes down. The price of petrol in South Africa goes up.

The Minister of Energy fumbles his way through an explanation. The only thing he makes clear is that, once again, we're being asked to pay for the National Party's fiscal incompetence.

Billions of rands are spent on the Moss gas project. The talk now is that it may be mothballed.

Millions squandered in the homelands. Millions of rands wasted in creating multiple, corrupt bureaucracies. Every rand, your taxes. Your money.

Does the National Party really believe the South African consumer is stupid?

Or have they been running our economy so poorly for so long that they can no longer even see their policies for what they are.

Empty.

NOW IS THE TIME FOR PEACE AND DEMOCRACY
