

THE ZUID-AFRIKAAN.

CAPE TOWN, JANUARY 23, 1852.

The Legislative Council met yesterday at 1 o'clock for the second reading of the Constitution Ordinance...

The manoeuvre is not more than what we expect. A tyrant, all the world knows, can only prolong his existence by the aid of mean artifices...

Messrs. Cook and Goddinton were perfectly aware of the time fixed for the second reading, in fact they fixed it themselves. They proceeded to the Frontier for purposes of their own...

What impression, we presume to ask, must such shuffling make upon the public mind? What can be done by believing in the existence of collusion among the body politic...

By the present manoeuvre another month will be added to those already gone by. It is highly necessary, therefore, that a powerful appeal, in the name of the people, should be made to Her Majesty...

We insert Mr. SHAW'S letter, but see no reason to modify our previous assertion. That he is not gifted with prescience, we admit; but why, when the general charge relative to the bad treatment of the burghers, without any distinction, was repeatedly made during a series of five years, he never came forward to state the different fate of those of Claarwilliam, is a question, the solution of which he evidently endeavours to evade.

turbed there. Several cities had been assailed by bands of Socialists, who had murdered respectable men, violated women, and committed the most diabolical acts. The Government, however, did not seem to entertain any fears for the result, and orders had been forthwith sent to extend no mercy to these murderers and freebooters...

The intelligence received in England from the Cape was up to the 18th October, and was deemed of the same discouraging nature as that previously received.

The European Times of the 15th December says, that were it not for the extraordinary events in France, either the Colonial or the Foreign Minister would have resigned the seats of office, as it was pretty generally believed that serious dissensions were manifesting themselves in the British Cabinet.

The retirement of Lord Grey from the Colonial Office, the same paper observes, would not be a source of bitter regret to the empire, and her present state of affairs at the Cape of Good Hope is not calculated to increase the popularity of his administration.

We insert Mr. SHAW'S letter, but see no reason to modify our previous assertion. That he is not gifted with prescience, we admit; but why, when the general charge relative to the bad treatment of the burghers, without any distinction, was repeatedly made during a series of five years, he never came forward to state the different fate of those of Claarwilliam, is a question, the solution of which he evidently endeavours to evade.

Original Correspondence. George Town, January 21, 1852. Sir, I beg to transmit to you herewith copy of a letter which I have sent, with its appendages, to the Editor of the Commercial Advertiser for publication...

George Town, January 21, 1852. Sir, I beg to transmit to you herewith copy of a letter which I have sent, with its appendages, to the Editor of the Commercial Advertiser for publication. By inserting the same in your paper, especially in Dutch, you will much oblige me.

I also send you the article taken from the Monitor with regard to the George meeting, which I request you will be good enough to publish in Dutch, so that the decided farmers at George, among whom your paper is widely circulated, can peruse it and judge for themselves.

The Cape Monitor, Cape Town, Saturday Jan. 17, 1852. The object of this Public Meeting held at "Gonaar," and at which these resolutions were passed, was to obtain signatures to a Petition to the "QUEEN" praying "HER MAJESTY" to order the Draft Constitution Ordinances to be carried into effect without further reference or delay.

The President having been informed that the Assembly plotted his arrest and overthrow, determined to anticipate them, and, whilst yet engaged in their deliberations, he commenced the execution of his schemes. Proclamations to the nation and to the army, in the first of which the President developed his cause, were immediately issued.

On the morning of the 2nd December, the anniversary of the coronation of the Emperor NAPOLEON in 1804, and of the Battle of Austerlitz in 1805, the streets of Paris were, in pursuance of previous arrangements, filled with masses of troops; and a decree was issued, declaring that the National Assembly and the Council of State were dissolved.

The troops evinced the most unflinching attachment, and all endeavours at opposition and violence were effectually put down. General CHANGARNIER attempted to harangue them, and Col. CHARBES and General BÉREAU forcibly opposed their arrest, but all was ineffectual. The street barricades were stormed and demolished, and several late members of the Assembly, who had placed themselves at the head of the insurgents, killed.

The Monitor, publishes the following "Proclamation of the President of the Republic to the French people." "Frenchmen!—The disturbances are appeased. Whatever may be the decision of the people, society is saved. The first part of my task is accomplished. The appeal to the nation, for the purpose of terminating the struggles of parties, I knew would not cause any serious risk to the public tranquility."

"If I do not any longer possess your confidence—if your ideas are changed—there is no occasion to make precious blood flow; it will be sufficient to place an adverse vote in the urn. I shall always respect the decision of the people. But as long as the nation shall not have spoken, I shall not recede before any effort, before any sacrifice to defeat the attempts of the factious. That task is, besides, made easy to me."

"On the one hand, it has been seen how foolish it is to struggle against an army united by the bonds of discipline, and animated by the sentiment of military honour and by devotion to the mother country."

"On the other hand, the calm attitude of the people of Paris, the repobation with which they condemned the insurrection, have testified with sufficient clearness for whom the capital pronounced itself."

"In the popular quarters in which insurrection formerly recruited itself so quickly among ourselves, doleful with respect to such matters, anarchy on this occasion was able to find nothing but repugnance for these detestable excursions. Thanks be rendered to the intelligent and patriotic population of Paris! Let it persuade itself more and more that my only ambition is to insure the repose and prosperity of France."

"Let it continue to lead its aid to the authorities, and the country will be able soon to accomplish, in tranquillity, the solemn act which must inaugurate a new era for the Republic."

"Done at the Palace of the Elysee, the 8th December, 1851. "LOUIS NAPOLEON BONAPARTE."

The accounts from the departments were less favorable, for although these had, with slight exceptions, expressed their satisfaction at the conduct of the President, tranquillity had been sadly dis-the gentleman, whom I mentioned in my former letter to you, had informed me that you had held originated from me, and having received no reply from you, yet, I shall consider you the author of this very false report.

George Town, Jan. 19, 1852. Sir, The article, which has attracted your attention in the Cape Monitor, which arrived at George this morning, was not written by me, nor have I sent to that paper any article for insertion on the subject of the meeting.

Your former letter I did not reply to, because I did not consider it necessary to do so;—it simply informed me that another gentleman had informed you that, in a conversation, I had attributed to you a certain political line of conduct, which I personally highly disapproved, and had stated that you had persuaded others to the same political course, by telling them of certain advantages which they would derive from the carrying out, on the part of the Government, of the measure, which you advocated;—and that an imposition had been practised upon me by the person or persons who informed me, that you had pursued such a course.

As you seem to have expected a reply to that letter, I now beg to acknowledge the receipt of it;—and as you have done me the favor to send me your denial of the course which I attributed to you, permit me to recommend, that in order to remove the same impression from the minds of others, who attended the meeting, you should undeceive the farmers, who in your hearing, as well as my own, certainly stated their expectation of the advantages above alluded to, should the measure which you advocate be pursued by the Government.

I remain, Sir, &c. E. BERGH, Esq. THOMAS E. WELBY. George Town, Jan. 19, 1852. Sir, I have to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of this day's date, and, from its contents, must conclude that the accusations, by which my character has been so uncharitably impugned, directly emanated from yourself. On your own showing, considering your position in society, I am sorry for it. The course you now adopt by insinuating that I am not just, (a conclusion every ingenious mind must come to from the concluding part of your letter) seems to be founded on some desultory expressions, made use of by some of the farmers, provoked by the very strange proceedings of the Reverend Mr. A. Nicophor, which I did not hear the assertions you allude to. If they had been uttered I must have heard them. But you were at the meeting,—a meeting properly convened and held,—why did you not dispute the farmers? This would have been the proper line of conduct to pursue, instead of attacking me as you did.

It is a well-known fact that I was opposed to the meeting held at the re-opening of the Government Forests;—while with regard to the Road system I am acquainted with that I am held as one of its warmest supporters. The farmers in this district know and believe it, and you will find it a great difficulty to disprove them of this belief. You admit the favor of my denial of the political course you attributed to me, but instead of apologizing for your rash and exceeding hurtful insinuations, or expressing your satisfaction of this my denial, you recommend that, in order to remove the same impression from the minds of others, who attended the meeting, I should undeceive the farmers, who in my hearing, as well as your own, certainly stated their expectation of the advantages above alluded to, should the measure which I advocate, be pursued by Government. Or in other words, you still adhere to your injurious expressed sentiments.—Be it so;—and, seeing this perversion, I must tell you that I shall by no means trouble myself about the impressions on the minds of your friends; leaving them and you in the quiet and undisturbed possession of such impressions, and contenting myself with the peace of my own mind, and the uprightness of my cause.

I am, Sir, your obedient servant, E. BERGH. George Town, Jan. 19, 1852. Sir, I beg to acknowledge the receipt of your letter, and to request that you will not again write to me on the same subject, as I must decline any further communication with you. I remain, &c. E. BERGH, Esq. T. E. WELBY.
