THE SUD-AFRIKAAN.

CAPE TOWN, OCTOBER 4, 1891.

In a relatively short time, the Strain force has been able to communicate with the European stations, and it has been announced that the force is in a state of readiness to move. The rapidity with which the Strain force has been able to develop its power has been owing to the promptness with which the European stations have been able to furnish information. The Strain force is now in a position to move at any moment, and it is expected that the force will be able to reach the European stations within a week.

A large body of Strain force has been dispatched to the Cape of Good Hope, where it is expected that the force will be able to communicate with the European stations. The Strain force is now in a position to move at any moment, and it is expected that the force will be able to reach the European stations within a week.
