

taking those we did taste, and the remarks of pronounced connoisseurs, it is not too much to say that, praiseworthy although the efforts of exhibitors were the general display in this as in every other occasion in memory, was not what it might have been. The first prize (£10) for best twelve leaguers green grape was taken by Mr. H. L. Neeshing whose wine was very highly spoken of. The sample marked "A.B." (W. A. Joubert), obtained the prize for Stein. "J.G.O." (Mr. Neeshing) being highly commended by the judges. For Dry Potage, Mr. Neeshing was the only competitor and therefore no prize was awarded; while Lechryma Christi there was not a simple sample to be seen. The sample "R.M.D." exhibited by Mr. A. Bosman de Villiers, took the prize for sweet Meuselid; and Frongiac and sweet Potage there were no entries. The wine farmer, looking through the lists of prizes offered and those really taken or competed for, must confess that the Society leaves a wide margin in its favour.

Mr. C. F. Beyers of Banhoek obtained the prize of £5 for the best leaguers of Cape brandy not under 20° Cartier. The sample tested and generally approved was certainly one of the most pure Cape brandies ever offered to the palate. Mr. Beyers should place a liquor of this sort into the market in quantities, and he would find it a most remunerative speculation. "R.T." (Mr. G. J. Joubert's) was highly commended but did not come up to Mr. Beyers in favour. The remark respecting the Banhoek "Flavour" (as the brandy was entered) applies equally to Mr. P. J. Wessels' (Fair) hoghead of cognac which also took a £5 prize. This brandy wanted but one thing, age and consequent mellowness, to make it almost perfect in its way. At any rate, it was worth the money daily paid for common and adulterated imported brandy. Some cognac of Messrs. Letterstedt & Co.'s marked "M." was highly commended. For gin and liqueurs there was no competition. Mr. W. Johnson exhibited a very good assortment of liqueurs but was shut out of a prize by the want of a competitor. "M" (Letterstedt & Co.) secured the £5 prize for the best leaguers of spirit of wine, "Q" (Mr. W. E. Joubert) receiving commendation. In Van der Rumm, Mr. L. Cloete's sample Ubi Cras was recommended for a prize. There were shown and tasted some excellent samples of Cape made ale, "M" (Letterstedt & Co.) which got the prize was capital brew, and "X X" (C and G Mustert) received a commendation.

The cereals as a rule looked healthy, the wheat especially so. "No fear" (Mr. P. A. Briers) took the £3 prize for the best three bushels of hard. There were seven competitors. Three entered for the prize (£3) for early wheat, and Mr. P. A. Myburgh's "P.A." took the prize; for any other kind of wheat the same gentleman's "Now or Never" (French, or what is called Hiddings's) was successful, seven again competing. For the best three bushels from seed imported during the last three years and free from rust there was but one entry "H.R." (Mr. Tilley, we believe, of the Round House) and therefore no prize given. Mr. G. Taylor, out of six exhibitors got the prize for the best malted barley; D Jennings was commended highly. Mr. Myburgh (P.A. or P.W.) obtained a £2 prize for best three bushels of oats; for do, do, from seed imported within the last three years there was only one entry—mark, "P.O." and fairly good. Messrs. C.F. and M. Beyers each exhibited some bags of rye, but there was no prize or competition. Mark "R.M.K." secured the prize (£1) for maize. There were three bags shown all very fine. Some maize flour ("Tuscorara") was also among the cereals. Mr. T. Gardner was the sender.

A great deal of attention was attracted to the flax and tow exhibited by Mr. Cogh of Durban; and we cannot do better justice to the maker than by quoting from Mr. Holding's recent notes on his trip through the Western agricultural districts. Writing of Durban, Cape Division, the able and popular Secretary of the Society says: "The village of Durban though somewhat small, possesses several attractions to an agricultural tourist, such as two steam-threshing machines imported by Mr. Turner, which have already amply remunerated their spirited proprietor, and greatly benefited the district. These also is a steam flour-mill, and the flax manufactory to which I am going to call attention. Whether flax can be profitably grown at the Cape remains to be seen; but Mr. Cogh has best claim to the honor of establishing the first steam-factory in the Western Province for its manipulation, and I cannot do better, perhaps, than quote his own words, and leave the public to form their conclusions respecting his perseverance and untiring efforts to establish this valuable and new branch of industry.

"Mr. Cogh commenced pulling the flax plants in November, 1869, on the farm of Mr. M. J. Louw, with whom he had made an arrangement. He likewise purchased plants from Messrs. S. J. van der Spuy and A. Louw, of Kooberg, sufficient as he believes, to yield ten tons of fibre, besides a quantity of tow, and at once erected the steam-engine which he had brought out with him from England, a steam-tight room, a condensing tank, steam pipes, and a scotch-machine made by himself. Much, however, to his disappointment, the machine in its first proved to be a failure. His second attempt was crowned with success, and the machinery may now be seen in full working order. Without entering into details regarding the manufacture of flax, and the various processes of steeping, bruising of the stems, and the beating away of the woody parts from the fibre, it may be as well to mention some of the benefits to be derived from the culture of flax. In the first place, the seed is of marketable value throughout the world—the chaff valuable for fodder, especially in dry seasons, and an excellent remedy, as many assert, in cases of lung-inflammation amongst cattle and last, though not least, the straw can be manufactured into the finest cambric, coarsest gunny-bag, or tarred rope. Mr. Cogh hopes soon to be in a position to buy up all the raw fibre from the surrounding farmers."

All we shall add here is, that we hope the farmers will help Mr. Cogh: by so doing they will enrich themselves. The offer of a £10 prize for the best bale of ginned cotton was a good step, but unfortunately there is not a bale to exhibit just now, although we believe there will be a lively competition in the article in succeeding years. The only cotton samples at the Show were some brought from Natal by the Rev Mr. Mason, and a small bag labeled "Cawood Brothers, Albany." We noticed a few cases full of cocoons, which deserved, though we are not sure that it gained a prize for there was no attempt at competition. The interest however taken in silk culture and reeling was exemplified by the fact that numbers of people attended in the Lodge-room, to see that enterprising lady, Mrs. Powell, working the machine she has lately brought from Germany, and the practised use of which she has taken as much time to acquire. Unfortunately, it was slightly out of order and therefore seen at a disadvantage, but there is not the slightest doubt as to its utility and ultimate success. £5 was offered for the best 40 lbs. of silk in cocoons, and we are sure that fresh evidences of spirit in the people would induce the Society to offer still larger prizes on future occasions.

£2 with a silver medal, was the prize for the best collection of manufactured leather. The two principals, if not the only exhibitors, were Messrs. M. J. Louw and R. Yellowless (or Woodhead & Co.) Mr. M. J. Louw put in four magnificent horse-hides, and Mr. Yellowless, ditto. Indeed, the judges found not a pin to choose, although to our mind the "Hope" prepared skins exhibited qualities we could not detect in the others. The sole leather was splendid; and one of the best judges and dealers in the colony assured us that if the leather industry is properly supported and carried on the demand for the English article will soon give way to a home-made leather. Between the competitors, however, the judges found no choice, and recommended both for medals and prizes. We must not overlook some kid and dogskin gloves shown by Mr. Yellowless. They were strong and shapely, but the dyeing is susceptible of some improvement which experience will bring about. There are many articles under the head of miscellaneous which must not be passed over.

On Saturday, the Post-office authorities had Butler arrested. The Inspector of Police searched him, and Butler stated that all the money he had about him was in his pocket, but Mr. Evans noticed that the man stood unsteady on his feet, and had the boot taken off. In the stockings was found a purse containing several pounds and a few stamps. The search was then continued further, and in a drawer used by the prisoner were found newspapers which the prisoner should have delivered.

On Monday a preliminary examination was made into the case, and Mr. Ford and Mr. Evans were examined. Mr. Evans gave substantially the evidence as reported above, and Mr. Ford stated that it was his opinion that it was Butler, and not Davidson, he saw coming out of the urinal, and brought up as his reason for so believing, that the man who came out of the urinal had on a glegary cap, and Butler, it appeared, was in the habit of wearing such a cap. The prisoner was remanded.

DEFALCATION OF AN OFFICIAL. A contemporary announces that another defalcation has been discovered by Government. It appears that the circumstances are, that Government had reason to suspect that Mr. Emett, the Civil Commissioner of Stockenstrom (Kat River), had been making away with some of the funds in his hands. Mr. Crosby, the Registrar of the Eastern Districts Court, was instructed to proceed at once and institute an enquiry. Mr. Crosby, on arriving at Stockenstrom, proceeded to look into the accounts, and he discovered that there was a deficiency of about £730. It is stated that Emett at once made a clean breast of it, admitted that he had used the money, or at any rate that he could not square the amount due. An examination took place, and the prisoner was admitted to bail on a bail-bond of £2000.

Mr. Emett was considered far removed above all suspicion of dishonesty. He bore a very high character for piety as well as probity. It is very sad to have so many cases of defalcations turning up from time to time.

A NARROW ESCAPE.—It appears that the up-train which left Wellington at three o'clock on Monday afternoon, had a narrow escape of being thrown off the rails soon after passing Klipmuts Station. It seems that a young bull belonging to one of the way-side cottagers had strayed onto the line, and not being seen by the engine driver, the train ran over it. Beyond a slight shock to the engine nothing of any consequence occurred. Proper precautions ought to be taken by persons living in the cottages along the line to see that their cattle do not stray in that direction as it might lead to something serious.

SERIOUS ACCIDENT TO A NAVAL OFFICER.—A short time since, a number of Cape Corps horses were disposed of by auction on the Parade. Amongst them was a chequer, which was purchased for £7. The owner of the animal endeavoured to break it in to harness, but without success, and on Saturday last it was reeled on the Parade, where it realised the sum of £4. On Sunday, two officers of the Gladiator, which man-of-war is lying in Simon's Bay, came up to town, one of them riding this old Cape Corps charger, which had fallen into the possession of a lively stable-keeper. Between Roodebloem and the toll the horse threw its rider. The officer, whose name is Lieutenant Alping, sustained severe concussion of the brain. He was conveyed very gently by cart to town and taken to the Masonic Hotel, where he remained insensible for some hours. We are informed that he is now out of danger.

STORM AT GRAHAM'S TOWN.—A violent thunderstorm burst over the city on Sunday afternoon. The lightning was for some time vivid and incessant, and the rain unusually heavy. The house occupied by Mr. Waters, near the Fort England bridge, was struck by lightning at about six p.m. Some damage was done to the building and six persons were knocked down, sustaining, however, but slight injury. There were seventeen persons in the house at the time, and it is astonishing that no loss of life occurred. The electric fluid seems to have entered by the chimney, displacing some bricks, and, after traversing three rooms, passed out of the kitchen. Heavy storms occurred at intervals during the night. A season so wet and disturbed as the present one has not been known for the last fifty years.—Journal.

THE Fort Beaufort Advocate gives the particulars of a remarkable case of murder. Some months ago the body of a Fingo woman named Meitje was found in the bed of the Kat River. Evidently she had been murdered by strangulation. Suspicion fell on her husband and the seeming coincidence of the track of his veld-beehoes with the tracks near the body confirmed the suspicion. But there were tracks of two men near the body, and he was liberated. He had formerly had two wives, Meitje and Dabashe. But Meitje and he, Quaba, becoming Christian converts, got married after the Christian rite, and Dabashe was put away. After some time Dabashe returned to Quaba's kraal, and shortly after that Meitje was murdered. After the murder Dabashe fell sick, and to relieve her troubled conscience told the story of Meitje's death—Quaba and one Tom, a Kafir, had murdered her, but failing they laylaid her in the river and strangled her with a handkerchief. Dabashe was

THE POST-OFFICE ROBBERY.

ANOTHER ARREST. It will be remembered that during the examination of Mr. Ford at the preliminary enquiry into the charge against Davidson, the following conversation took place:—

The Magistrate.—How did you know that it was a man from the Post-office?
Witness.—Because I believed it was this man.
The Magistrate.—Why cannot you swear to him now?

Witness.—Because there is another man named Butler in the Post-office very like him.
The Magistrate.—Well, we will have Butler here. Will you be able to tell one from the other?
Witness.—I shall be able to do that. I could not conscientiously swear it was one or the other. I supposed the man was the prisoner, because the man in the urinal had red hair, I had seen the man often before. I only saw his side face as he was leaning over the grating the first, and on the second time he had his back towards me.

The Magistrate.—Am I to understand that you do not know whether it was this man or Butler?
Witness.—No; I believe it was this man.
On Saturday, the Post-office authorities had Butler arrested. The Inspector of Police searched him, and Butler stated that all the money he had about him was in his pocket, but Mr. Evans noticed that the man stood unsteady on his feet, and had the boot taken off. Dabashe was taken as Queen's evidence and Quaba and Tom were arrested. An agent gave Quaba hope of an acquittal on the ground that Dabashe's statement could not be confirmed by evidence, but Quaba said he had no wish to escape the judge, for he said he had destroyed his own flesh; he could not escape the Judge in another world, and he did not care to escape the one in this. He wished the magistrate and the world to know this. His confession before the Magistrate followed, and he now awaits his trial. The motive of the murder was the wish to get rid of Meitje that Dabashe might take her place. The man wishing to keep up the appearance of a Christian life, of living with one wife, commits a foul murder that he may do so.

QUICK TRAVELLING.—A remarkable instance of quick travelling on foot has just been brought to our notice. On the 25th February, Mr. Freilich, Magistrate's Clerk, gave a pass to a Kafir to proceed to Willowmore, distant 216 miles, to bring proof how he came by stock found in his possession: He went, and procured the necessary certificate, and returned to Cradock on 11th March, thus performing the whole journey of 432 miles in 14 days, being nearly 31 miles per day, including detention.—Express.

RATHER EXHIBITANT.—His Honor Mr Justice Smith stayed one night in Burgersdorp on his way from Alwal North to Colesberg, and on his leaving Burgersdorp was presented with a bill of £10 for the night's lodging and a bill for 80s for a dinner consisting of two fowls. We (Colerberg Herald), understand that his Lordship refused to pay this exhibitant price, and we think he was right. This charge is independent of the forage for the horses.
