SPORTS

Jewish Bowling Club for Durban

A new bowling club has been formed in Durban by a number of Jewish sportsmen. Affiliated to the Durban and District Bowling Association the Circle club has not been founded on sectional lines, but with a move to popularise the game among the members of Durban Jewry and thus draw them into the sporting arena.

The fine green adjoins the premises of the Durban Jewish Club and is therefore conveniently situated. Mr. H. Patz is the chairman and Mr. Joe Feitelberg is the club captain. Both are prominent Durban bowlers. The club boasts of a membership of sixty-five.

Rough House Wrestling at Wembley

The debut of Clem Lawrence, a film actor cum-wrestler, at Wembley on Monday night attracted a fair crowd, who came to see the blood and thunder sport that is now the talk of the town.

There were thrills galore in the Abe Morris-Rudy Sharda contest. Hair-pulling and other caveman stunts were indulged in. The referee came in for a spot of mauling and there was wrestling in and out of the ring. At one stage it appeared as if the bout was between Morris and the referee. The contest ended in a draw.

"Outlaw" Oswald and Clem Lawrence put up a better fight than expected. In contrast to the former battle it was an orderly affair. Lawrence proved himself a clever grappler and gave Oswald lots to think about. Lawrence won by two falls to one, and the decision was a popular one. The promotion of this bill was by the Union Sporting Club, who are always out to please the fans.

Sherman Draws With Parks

There was a sensational end to the Sherman-Parks fight at the City Hall last Saturday night. Leaving his "pile-driver" at home after Dr. G. F. Vercueil had warned him against using it, Herb Parks came into the ring to butt and to kick. Sherman seemed more confident than ever. The grapplers mixed it. Aeroplane spins, arm-locks and scissors made it look like an interesting fight. Charging Sherman with his shoulders, Parks sent his man flying through the ropes. Sherman returned to the ring after a long count. Then came the mule kicks. Parks picked Sherman up and dumped him on the press table. Sherman followed suit, and Referee Jacobs wondered what was coming next.

Wrestling gave way to a scrambled mix-up. The brawl became a gory affair, and if the excited crowd enjoyed it, the wrestlers didn't. Fearing that their antics would have disastrous consequences, Dr. Vercueil, chairman of the Board of Control, jumped into the ring . . . and it was all over. A draw.

The preliminaries were interesting. Alf Woods and Chaplin Stewart had a spot of bother, kept the crowd in good humour and shared the decision in a thrilling bout. Vernon bashed the nippy Bill the Basher and won by 2 falls to 1. The tournament was a Transvaal National Sporting Club promotion, and except for the disappointing end to the big fight, was an enjoyable one for the fans.

TODAY

IN JEWISH HISTORY

An Educationist

ON the 26th of November, 1869 there was born in Manchester, Alfred Eichholz. After a distinguished career at Cambridge, he took up medicine, obtained his doctorate and returned to Cambridge as a fellow of his college. In 1898 he became an inspector of schools under the Board of Education and there his medical knowledge at once indicated the establishment of special schools for children suffering from infirmities as his province. To this work he devoted the remainder of his life. On the education of the blind, the deaf and the feeble-minded he rose to be the recognised authority. He gave evidence on these subjects before many government committees and a report he wrote for the Board of Education and Ministry of Health had the almost unique distinction of being published over his name. At the same time he devoted much of his leisure to Jewish public affairs and in particular to Jewish education.
