Lionel Bowman.

FIRST SOLOIST OF THE ORCHESTRAL SEASON.

Lionel Bowman, the young South African pianist, will be the first soloist of the new orchestral season, when he will play the concerto in D minor by Mozart next Thursday. Mr. Bowman always proves a great attraction and this performance should draw a very big house as it is some time since Mr. Bowman has played at the City Hall.

PLAZA.

"Under Your Hat" at the Plaza reaches its 30th performance to-morrow. This Cicely Courtneidge-Jack Hulbert musical comedy is certainly one of the most enjoyable films we have seen. The season will conclude on Tuesday night.

"Ziegfeld Girl" will open on Wednesday. This is the sequel to that notable success "The Great Ziegfeld." Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer assembled its finest array of talent for this colossal production. James Stewart, Lana Turner, Hedy Lamarr, Judy Garland, Ian Hunter, Charles Winniger and a good many others figure in the cast. There are hundreds of dancers, singers, vaudeville artists and show girls, lavish settings, and a powerful plot. The music is excellent and there are many outstanding song numbers.

COLOSSEUM.

The Colosseum will shortly show one of the year's most unusual films. It is called "Flight From Destiny" and it is a picture as important as its title. The film stars are Thomas Mitchell, Academy Award winner, Geraldine Fitzgerald of "Dark Victory," Jeffrey Lynn, star of "All This and Heaven Too," and James Stephenson. The story concerns Professor Henry Todhunter, played by Thomas Mitchell, who is suffering from a heart ailment which allows him only six more months to live. His doings during that period provide a plot which is crammed with suspense.

ROYAL.

The Marx Brothers are back and that means a return of laughs and all-round happiness. Their newest comedy hit, "Go West," opens at the Royal Theatre on Monday next. This time they poke fun at the Early West in a hilarious way. They go out West in 1870 to Colorado's gold fields—and they tear the West to bits. In their work they are aided and abetted by John Carroll and Diana Lewis, a charming pair of romancers; Walter Woolf King, Robert Barrat and Mitchell Lewis as a trio of villains; and June MacCloy, Joan Woodbury and Iris Adian.

ODEON.

A film in which Charles Laughton appears needs little recommendation. There can never be any doubt that this brilliant actor will exact the last ounce from whatever part he takes. "Jamaica Inn" now showing at the Odeon, is a blood-curdling story of the callous wrecking of ships on the Cornish coast during the middle of the 19th century, and it gives Laughton an excellent opportunity to use his talents to the full. Although his performance is apt to overshadow the rest of the cast, it would be a pity to overlook the excellent acting of the other members of it. Leslie Banks and Emlyn Williams, whose names in themselves are a guarantee of polished performance, take the parts of the innkeeper and a member of the gang respectively. Maureen O'Hara, as the niece of the innkeeper's wife, gives a spirited performance which, coupled with her beauty, should help her well on the way to stardom.
